New film "Foreign" directed by Rahul Nath

"Foreign" a film that engulfs many controversial subjects has created fireworks in India's festival circuit and is now set to do the same in the USA, New Zealand, Australia and in other countries. The film which marks the debut of actor Rahul Nath's direction has gathered attention very fast and also excellent reviews for the cast and Rahul himself.

The story is not a regular run of the mill one and viewers will gravitate to the movie the second it starts. "Foreign" tells the story of Radhika, a girl from India that comes to the USA to begin her new married life. But she soon discovers that the honeymoon is over when her husband is abusive and her mother-in-law is a spiteful and evil bully. As time progresses, Radhika begins to feel isolated and lonely and seeks refuge with the local doctor who happens to be a friend of the family and he reassures her that everything will work itself out. A series of meetings with the doctor leads to a shocking revelation that Radhika is HIV positive and by chance Radhika discovers that her husband and the doctor have been previous lovers. This then leads to a sequence of events where Radhika plans her revenge.

The film is great as it keeps the audience on a continual roller coaster ride, where what you think, will not be the outcome. The strongest thread of this movie is its premise. To have such bold issues (and not one, but several) and to show case all of them in one sitting is a huge achievement. Kudos to Nath who ties in the subjects so well, that we are not overwhelmed, but intrigued at all times
